Interdisciplinary Management of Anterior Aesthetic Dilemmas

Vincent O. Kokich, Jr., DMD, MSD

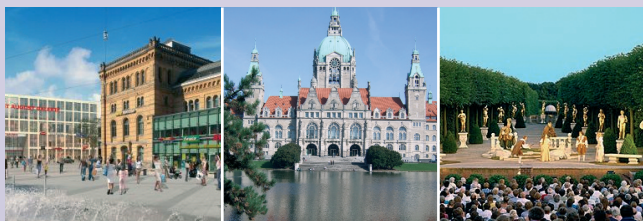

In our modern society we and our work are strongly influenced by visual media. In recent years television and movies have promoted the importance of dental and facial esthetics. As a result, our patients have a heightened their level of "dental perception" when it comes to smile esthetics. So now in reality, they may be more aware of many common anterior dental esthetic discrepancies than once was thought. To achieve the most predictable and esthetic result in patients with anterior tooth size discrepancies and/or gingival margin irregularities, it is often necessary to incorporate orthodontics or periodontal surgery as well as restorative dentistry – already at the planning phase of the treatment. This presentation will emphasize the importance of using an interdisciplinary "team" treatment approach when treating these patients.

Biography

Dr. Kokich Jr. received his dental degree from Tufts University and his masters in Orthodontics from the University of Washington where he teaches part time as an Affiliate Assistant Professor in the Department of Orthodontics. He has received the Charles L. Pincus Award for Clinical Research from the American Academy of Esthetic Dentistry and is currently on the editorial advisory board for Advanced Esthetics & Interdisciplinary Dentistry. Dr. Kokich's research and publications are primarily involved with esthetic, interdisciplinary dentistry. He is also a diplomate of the American Board of Orthodontists and a member of the American Academy of Esthetic Dentistry.
